Cllr. Liam Quinn

Cathaoirleach
Offaly County Council

Tullamore is a vibrant and modern town. Its central location puts even the farthest parts of Ireland within a day's journey. It has a catchment area of 45,000 people for commercial and shopping services. There are many attractive features, buildings, amenities, quality restaurants and accommodation and at the old distillery harbour, Tullamore Dew Heritage Centre. The neo-classical courthouse, designed by J.B. Keane, is situated at the southern end of the town. Built in 1833, the building is set back from the street on a height, in a parkland setting with boundary railings. The courthouse is the administrative centre for Offaly County Council and also provides court facilities. The Mallet Tavern situated on the banks of the canal to the west of the town was the only thatched pub to survive the great fire in Tullamore in 1785.

Tullamore today has a population of around 15,000 and has been the capital town of Offaly since 1833. It's more than twice the size of its nearest rival, Birr. Yet records from the 1660s put Tullamore's population at 100, while Birr was considerably larger with 700 inhabitants.

John Moore, who was the son of Thomas Moore, an Elizabethan soldier, had received lands at Croghan Hill, an extinct volcano in east Offaly in the 1570's as part of the first British plantation of Offaly. The Moore family let long lease on their Tullamore lands throughout the seventeenth century, choosing to live at Croghan Castle instead.

A future generation of the Moore family decided to leave their home at Croghan Castle in the early 1700s and built a house in Tullamore, near where the harbour is today. No trace of this house now remains. Through political influence, they had a barracks built to house 100 British foot soldiers in 1716, and by the late 1720s, a Protestant church was built in Church Lane, now Church Street. This building also no longer exists.

The arrival of the soldiers proved to be an attraction for businesses to the area and a key factor in the early growth of Tullamore. The first recorded building lease is one from the Moore family to Richard Brennan, a tobacco spinner, in 1713. His premises is now the Brewery Tap bar in O'Connor square.

By the mid 1760s Tullamore would have consisted of Patrick Street, Church Street, Bridge Street, part of O'Connor Square and part of High Street. Town development then suffered a setback following the death of Charles Moore, first Earl of Charleville who had encouraged building development. On Charles Moore's death the property passed first to his sister's husband, John Bury of Shannongrove, Limerick who died soon after in a bathing accident at Ringsend, Dublin.

Tullamore then passed to Moore's nephew, Charles William Bury, a child of six months. During his younger years there were no leases for more than 21 years granted and thus no new building activity. Charles William Bury's coming of age in 1785 coincided with the famous balloon fire in Tullamore.

A hot air balloon crash landed in the town leading to a fire that caused serious damage to around 100 houses in the Patrick Street area. Exact details of the damage caused are sketchy and some accounts are conflicting, but it is believed that most of Kilbride Street was also burnt to the ground, with the exception of Molloy's pub, the Mallet Tavern, the oldest pub in Tullamore, which still stands today and is still a pub. This flight of a hot air balloon took place only two years after the first flight in Paris.

Charles William Bury presided over the fortunes of Tullamore 'til his death 50 years later. The burning of Patrick Street gave him an opportunity to let the properties there on new leases and widen the street in the process. During this time the population trebled to over 6,000 in 1841. There was also the matter of the Grand Canal which was linked to Tullamore in 1798 and to the river Shannon in 1804. The canal marked the northern boundary of the town until the 1900s, as did the railway line from 1858 on the southern side. The canal provided a link to Dublin and a great method of transporting goods to and from the capital. Tullamore is now the biggest urban area the grand canal passes through outside of Dublin.

The town is laid out on a gridiron pattern with the principal street running from the road to Kilbeggan at the north end of the town to the road to Birr at the south and beyond it to Charleville Castle, situated in Charleville woods just outside the town. The castle was completed between 1800 and 1812 and became the home of the former owners of the town, the earls of Charleville. It was designed by Francis Johnston who also designed Dublin's GPO, is considered one of the finest Gothic style country houses in Ireland and is now open to the public.

Charleville Castle

The new streets, such as Offaly Street, Harbour Street and William Street all followed the grid iron pattern and a second Market square was provided in the 1820s, still named Market Square today. The Tullamore tenants petitioned the Irish House of Commons in 1784 and in 1786 to designate Tullamore as the county capital in place of Daingean, but because of the significant political influence of the Ponsonby family, now owners of Daingean, this was not achieved until 1833. The county jail was built in Tullamore in 1826 and the county courthouse in 1835.

The origins of the town's most famous export, Tullamore Dew - the legendary Irish whiskey - can be traced back to 1829 when the Tullamore Distillery was founded by Michael Molloy. In 1887, following the death of Mr Molloy, the distillery passed into the hands of the Daly family with Captain Bernard Daly in charge of the business. A keen sportsman, Captain Daly left the routine running of the distillery to one of his colleagues, Daniel E Williams. Williams was the major influence in the expansion and development of the distillery His initials D.E.W inspired the whiskey to be named 'Tullamore Dew' with its slogan "Give every man his Dew" which appeared on the bottles for many years. In 1947, the distillery also gave birth to Irish Mist liqueur. Sadly, the huge canalside building is no longer a functional distillery with both drinks now being made elsewhere. However, thankfully the place was preserved and is now the tullamore dew heritage centre, housing a bar and a superb museum for visitors to take a trip down memory lane.

The famous D.E. Williams Distillery

Building developers were draughted in to oversee the expansion of Tullamore. Chief among these developers was Thomas Acres whose house is now the headquarters of Tullamore Town Council at the top of high street. There was large scale building and development in the town from this time right up until the beginning of the famine in 1845.

Clonmacnoise

Clonmacnoise (the Irish Cluain Mhic Nois means the meadow of the sons of Nos) was founded in 548 by St. Ciaran the son of a wright or master craftsman. The pivotal location contributed to the development of Clonmacnoise as a major centre of religion, learning, trade, craftsmanship and political influence. As the burial place of St. Ciaran, it has attracted pilgrims for nearly 1500 years.

Situated on an esker ridge overlooking a large area of bog through which the river Shannon flows, its location in earlier times was literally at the crossroads of Ireland where the north/south artery of communication, the Shannon, crossed the major east/west routeway along the gravel ridges of the glacial eskers. Clonmacnoise has been a national Monument since 1877 and is now under the care of Dúchas, The Heritage Service of the Department of Arts, Heritage, Gaeltacht and the Islands. The site now offers exhibitions, audio-visual show, guided tours, tearooms, car/coach parking and tourist information services. For further details or reservations contact: Tel: (0)90 96 74195

Birr

Set in the southwest of County Offaly, Birr is the most attractive and well kept town in the county. With tree-lined avenues and Georgian Houses, Birr is a town with much character.

Initially a monastic town from the 12th century when St. Brendan of Birr founded a monastery, it was in the 13th century that, like so many other towns, it became a Norman town. During the Plantations of 1620 the estate, including the castle, were given to the Parsons in whose hands the estate remains after 14 generations.

The main attraction today is the gardens of Birr Castle which contain over 1000 species of different shrubs.

Also in the castle grounds is the world famous telescope. Completed in 1845, scientists and astronomers from all over the world came to use the telescope. It remained the largest in existence for 75 years. The telescope was used in the mapping of the moon. Demonstrations take place 3 times daily as to how the telescope worked.

Dooley's Hotel stands in Emmet Square, the very centre of Georgian Birr. The hotel is one of the oldest coaching inns in the country dating back to 1747 and now enjoys the status of being a 3 star hotel.

Birr was laid out during the Georgian period and still retains many of its original features such as its wide tree lined walls, pleasant gardens, period houses and Georgian character. The town itself reflects the peace and contentment of its surrounding countryside.

Birr Restaurants

Brambles Cafe & Deli

Glendeer Open Farm

After 20 very successful years in business, Glendeer Farm, Drum, Athlone has introduced these new animals to help celebrate the farm's birthday and to make everyone's visit even more fun.

Along with the two cheeky capuchin monkeys and three wallabies, there's a range of other farm animals, fowl and more exotic species for animal-lovers to enjoy; the Vietnamese pot bellied pig & piglets, llamas, emu, ostrich, goats, donkeys, guinea pigs, pheasants and peacocks! Also new this season, are the two tortoises who are 60 and 80 years old as well as the baby deer and the annual favourites that are the puppies and kittens.

A visit to Glendeer Pet Farm is an unforgettable experience for children. They can pet and feed many of the animals and their young, while learning about animal life, and their habits.

Turoe Pet Farm

Just back from a great couple of hours at Turoe Pet Farm. There's a nice selection of friendly animals which the children could feed. Included in the entry fee is a bag of animal nuts per child. The animals (goats, sheep, donkeys, llama) will happily take this food from your child's hand. We brought our own picnic (which is allowed) and had it outdoors but, if the weather was poor, there's a large indoor area with picnic benches (and flat-screen TVs showing the Olympics)!. After the kids did some bouncing around the two indoor play areas, we decided to have our lunch at the Pet Farm and we were very impressed. The meals were very reasonably priced and the food was of excellent quality. We were happy that there were some non-chip options e.g. our Kids had chicken curry with rice.

Fishing in the District

Banagher is located in Co Offaly (Mid Shannon Area) - about 75 kms from Limerick, and approximately 150 kms from Dublin.

This is a well established and well serviced coarse angling centre with specialist operators resident to look after your needs. There are plenty of angling venues around the centre, mainly on the main River Shannon. Access is very good generally and a number of developments including new access roads and other facilities have been undertaken over recent years by the Shannon Regional Fisheries Board. The Grand Canal is also in very close proximity offering easy bank fishing around Shannon Harbour 5 km away and at Fermoy. As there is much water on the Shannon, anglers are encouraged to hire boats and explore virtually 'hidden waters' where access is only possible by boat. For the Pike angler fishing is often very productive on the main river, especially around Meelick where fish up to 20lbs + are reported quite frequently.

Below is a list of the main angling venues/hotspots in the area.

You can browse and book local ANGLING SERVICES AND ACCOMMODATION in advance of your trip to this area. If you feel you need further assistance, contact the Angling Section Tel: 057 9121777 or email Brian Mc Manus at the Angling Section for assistance: info@shannon-fishery-board.ie

FISHING SEASON

There is no close season for Coarse and Pike fishing but there are best times for individual species.

FISHING ADVICE

To facilitate anglers, particularly those of you who are less experienced or those coming to Ireland for the first time, we recommend you review and follow tips and advice on COARSE AND PIKE FISHING IN IRELAND

There is no rod licence required for coarse and pike fishing on the River Shannon.

However, as Banagher Bridge forms the demarcation line between the South and North Shannon Regions, a fee in the form of a Share Certificate is required to fish the Shannon upstream of the bridge, the fee is voluntary to fish downstream of the bridge, payable to the Lower Shannon Trout & Coarse Fisheries Development Society. Please contact the North Shannon Co -Operative Society for up to date information on applicable rates and distributors as the Shannon Regional Fisheries Board do not issue or administer Share Certificates. Contact Mr Martin Mc Enroe Athlone Telephone Number: 090 64 94800.

COARSE & PIKE ANGLING BYE LAWS

ORDER A POCKET GUIDE TO PIKE AND COARSE FISH BYE LAWS IN 8 DIFFERENT LANGUAGES

The ShRFB recently published a pocket guide to Pike and Coarse Fish Bye Laws in eight different languages (English, German, French, Polish, Lithuanian, Latvian, Hungarian and Russian). Anglers can request a copy HERE or it can also be DOWNLOADED in pdf (7.38Mb) for those with broadband

Lough Cloghan,Boora Parklands, Cloghan

There are excellent facilities on the lake including a number of fishing stands constructed by the Shannon Regional Fisheries Board. Other facilities include a car park, access paths to the stands and an information board located at the venue. Frequent stocking is carried out by Cloghan Angling Club, which is assisted by the Shannon Board.

As some of the Midland Bogs have reached the end of their commercial life Bord na Mona in association with the local development groups have undertaken extensive work to ecologically restore the cutaway bogs into a pleasant natural environment with amenities which will benefit local communities. As part of the development plan, five angling lakes have been developed at Boora Parklands since 1995. More recently a new lake Lough Cloghan was opened by Liam Hyland MEP on May 1st 1999. This is a 10 acre 'put and take' trout fishery located a few miles outside Cloghan village in Co Offaly. It is currently leased by Bord na Mona to Cloghan Angling Club who have overall responsibility for it's management. A Fishery Committee is established with representatives from the Local Community, Bord na Mona, Shannon Regional Fisheries Board and the local Angling Club. In association with FAS a manager has been appointed to run the fishery. As a put and take fishery with stocked trout fishing with regular wetflies will work well. Lure flies such as Baby Doll, Viva, Black Ghost and Muddlers are said to be working well.

The Camcor River

The Camcor River rises on the western slopes of the Slieve Bloom mountains and is the primary tributary of the Little Brosna River where it joins at the Castle Demesne in Birr town a distance of about 12 miles. A spate river with its interesting character meanders quite a bit immediately above Birr and then alternates between long flats with occasional broken rifled areas, glides and pools. With a rolling gravel bed it is an ideal spawning river for salmonid species (salmon and trout). Resident local trout of up to 1lb+ are present but are generally smaller at about 8 - 12ozs. The river receives migratory runs of large Lough Derg trout, locally know as 'CRONEEN on route to spawn. Recent scientific investigation has found that the CRONEEN trout are a UNIQUE SPECIES to the Birr area.

The Little Brosna and Camcor Fishing Club have local rules for the river. We request that anglers observe these rules in the interest of conservation and local angling policy. Further details, please contact Mr Chris Brummell Membership Sec, Little Brosna and Camcor Fishing Club Mobile Number: 086 3858221 or 057 93 22082

Shannonbridge

The village of Shannonbridge is an old and long established angling centre located on the banks of the Mid River Shannon in Co Offaly, about half way between Lough Derg to the south and Lough Ree to the north.

First time visitors to Shannonbridge are faced with the question of where to fish, as there is such a choice of angling waters. On this guide there is a total of 12 angling hotspots described, extending from Clonmacnoise on the River Shannon to the north of Shannonbridge, downstream through Shannonbridge village as far as Shannon harbour near Banagher, a total distance of about 14 miles. Specimen Tench are frequently recorded off the Hot Water stretch. The guide covers the Lower River Suck which flows from the west through Ballinasloe to its confluence with the River Shannon a short distance below Shannonbridge village. But don't forget there are other neighbouring angling centres of which Shannonbridge serves as a good base, ATHLONE is 15 miles to the north and BANAGHER 8 miles downriver to the south, Ballinasloe to the west covers about 8 miles of mainly slow moving and quite deep, meandering but often very productive waters on the lower River Suck system.

As with much of the Shannon and its tributaries, there are many 'hidden' waters inaccessible by road which have barely seen a boat, let alone an angler. This is what makes the area so unique and interesting as anglers who like to explore such 'hidden' waters do so fishing from boats and cruisers. For those more adventurous anglers willing to explore these extensive waters, boats are available for hire in the village.

Everything an angler needs is available in the village, including prime and highly specialised accommodation providers, restaurants and other services anglers look for. Killeen's Pub and well known angling specialists and others in the village have a vast knowledge of the waters in the area and will offer you all the assistance and advice you require while visiting the area or where necessary in helping you organise your trip to the area. Killeen's provide live entertainment in their village pub, are official bait stockists, have fishing tackle and have angling log books to enable you to record your catch details each day. They have Specimen scales to facilitate the specimen hunter.

Pallas Lake

Pallas Lake is a small landlocked midland limestone lake about 8 miles from Tullamore town. The lake covers an area of 33 acres (13 Hectares) As a 'put and take' trout fishery, it is stocked regularly by the Fishery Board with rainbow and brown trout and gives good sport throughout the season. When fish over winter they tend to grow large. Rainbow of 7 - 12lbs have been caught here. Typically fish of 1- 2lbs are the norm. The banks are soft and wading can be a dangerous exercise. Fishing stands are provided and there are plans to extend these stands in the future. In the interest of safety anglers are advised to confine their fishing to the stands. A range of traditional wet flies and lures work well, The Muddler Minnow, Viva, Baby Doll are some lure names which work well here.

The Kilcormac Silver River is a tributary of the Brosna River and holds fair stocks of wild brown trout averaging half a pound.

Tullamore Silver River

This small limestone River holds good stocks of wild brown trout averaging 0.5lbs. It has good fly hatches but tends to weed up in summer making fishing more difficult.

The Clodiagh River is a tributary of the River Brosna. While access is good, the river was drained and consequently some of the banks are steep, please be careful. The river holds fair stocks of wild brown trout ranging from 0.75lbs to 2lbs.

The Gageborough is a small river which holds a fair stock of brown trout up to 1lb. The best fishing stretch is upstream of the confluence with the River Brosna.

If you are planning a fishing trip to our region and need assistance please contact Brian Mc Manus, Angling Section Tel 057 9121777 Fax: 057 9121756 or email info@shannon-fishery-board.ie

MUSIC SESSIONS IN THE LOCALS

One of the most Irish of evening entertainments is the "session". An informal gathering of amateur musicians in a local pub leading to a communal appreciation and celebration of traditional music. It can also take the form of parting or instructing in a specific music instrument - as the late USA President Gerald Ford (pictured above) gets from "Ringo" McDonagh from the famous "De Dannan" group. Also in the picture are former Taoiseach, the late Jack Lynch and former Government Minister Des O'Malley.

Most sessions start at around 9.30 pm or whenever a few musicians have gathered. Somebody starts beating a rhythm on a bodhrán or improvising a tune on a banjo. Somebody joins in with another instrument and suddenly the whole pub seems to be filled with music. The actual choice of music can be described as "pot luck" - depending on the proficiency of the musicians, their ability to actually play together and the general mood. You might be induced to hop up and down by rousing jigs and reels or moved to shed a tear by a slow, plaintive air.

Shannonbridge: (What Visitors say...)

You can moor your cruiser neatly only a few yards away from the nearest pub and that's always good. This pub is called Lukers, nearly has its toes in the water, and it could yet be a rival for the unique one we are going to have a pint in a little later because proprietor John Joe Ryan, who was known to one of our party, has grafted the modernity of the present era neatly on to the amazing old pub, which boasts a Victorian fireplace so rare that even journalists who write about classic fireplaces come to have a pint here. It has a number of unusual features such as a hinged front grille, and the image of the old Regina herself, just like on the letterboxes, hawkishly eyeballs you from either side of the glowing fire where old Eric Luker used love to entertain both locals and river folk. John Joe's customers have the choice today of the old and the new and a fair few of them, he tells us, choose to spend time by the old Queen's fire. We enjoy a good drink here before moving on.

Ferbane

Hennessy's Pub Main St, Ferbane Co. Offaly has a rich and long heritage. In 1846 James Hennessy ran a temperance coffee house and in 1870 Owen Hennessy changed over the establishment to Hennessy's Public House. His 3 grandsons Jimmy, Dan and Owen were bachelors and throughout the last half of the last century they took over the reigns and from their love of life and many friends the place was known as the best watering hole around the midlands. Now under new management they want to maintain that sense of history and character while also embracing current trends. Old customs are a rarity these days. 3 things you can be guaranteed, on entering Hennessy's. A friendly welcome a great pint and a bit of craic.

Banagher

Corrigans: We stopped off on our way to Athlone on the Shannon. great pub...fantastic atmosphere, clean, and friendly staff a truly Irish pub!! great band with trumpet player on the night we were there. loved it ?

Brosna Lodge Hotel: Music and entertainment at weekends. Perfect for that Fishing Holiday (special prices) or have that round of Golf at 10 different courses nearby. A place to remember. Enjoy a drink in Pat's Olde Bar where you can cuddle up at one of our open fires.
